Cannot Hope for Larger Powers Without Independence, Says Belcourt

Canada's status in imperial affairs was the subject of an address delivered to the Canadian Club, last week, by Senator N. A. Belcourt, envoy extraordinary of the Canadian government at the recent conference in London.

After describing how nearly the British Dominions were having to direct representatives, Senator Belcourt said:

"The question of Canadian status in connection with treaties, and conferences, is no longer debatable. It has been settled definitely by the agreement which was drawn up at the imperial conference in 1923. Canada is entitled to separate and equal representation with Great Britain and the other dominions of the empire."

Right is Earned

Senator Belcourt pointed out that because of what Canada did in the war, Great Britain had recognized her right "to be consulted and to have representation and full power in all international agreements and treaties."

"I cannot see how we can hope for larger powers unless we become an independent nation, and accept the consequences."

"And as for the present, I am certainly not prepared to say that we should cut the pulpit."

Senator Belcourt declared that the international conference held in London last summer to smooth the way for making the Dawes reparations operation was the most eloquent and portentous event, of modern times, and marked an epoch in the history of nations equal at least to that when man finally emerged from the jungle.

The application of the McBride Hotel for vacation of the property in the city and tax transfer, covering the un-subdivided part of Woodies, Plan K-9.

The Surveyor to the Land Titles Office, Edmonton, wrote forwarding plans for Nos. 16-28-24 and 16-28-24, with order of Public Utilities Commission vesting the property in the city and tax transfer, covering the un-subdivided part of Woodies, Plan K-9.

4. The travelling of First St. South has been completed from First Avenue to the Westwood Creek. Foreman Jones is now hauling debris to Poplar St., and intends to finish Waskasoo Ave. west of the creek. It might be possible to gravel the low place on Ross St. near the Creek before severe weather.

6. Date should be fixed for the Court of Revision on the 22nd of November.
7. We submit departmental reports for October.
8. We submit accounts for your authorization to pay.
9. We submit statement of receipts and disbursements for October.
10. We submit your consideration a By-law to provide for the holding of the annual election of the City Council.
11. Commissioner Stephenson arranged at Edmonton for final clearing up of the Waskasoo Creek. The City Office, and with the Public Utilities Commissioners for a procedure that will permit of the completion of the cancellation of part of South Mount Royal.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. COLLISON
A. T. STEPHENSON

On Clause 1, the Commissioner reported that the town was contending that the lady concerned was not a bona-fide resident of the city, which that her home was in Montreal. The Provincial Medical Health Officer takes a different view. The matter is likely to be referred to the court for a decision.

On Clause 2, the Commissioner reported that the woman concerned had not improved.

On Clause 4, Foreman Jones and the City Engineer, Mr. Adams, of the City Office, and with the Public Utilities Commissioners for a procedure that will permit of the completion of the cancellation of part of South Mount Royal.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Departmental Reports

Fire Chief Taylor reported average attendance at practice of 19. During the week, slides were shown at the Rex Theatre; bills and printed matter were distributed; the business section, and the use of fire extinguishers was explained to the school teaching staff. There were four men sleeping at the fire hall, and 24 members on the roll.

Chief of Police Streifford reported 4 arrests made during the month, and nine police court cases, eight warnings were given motorists, damage was settled in three motor accidents. One case was destroyed; rug and overcoat were recovered; 81 transients were rounded up and ordered to get work or leave town; 4 cases settled out of court. The regular inspections had been made, and toilets and septic tanks inspected.

Roads Need Surfacing

Roads Foreman Jones reported:—We experienced considerable difficulty in maintaining our streets and roads after the rains of the first of this month. To help out with this work, we, with the approval of the Commissioners, secured the loan of a government grader from Mr. Alsworth, the provincial road inspector, to maintain some of the roads that it was impossible to put in shape with the road drag.

I should like in this report to call your attention to the effect of the present-day traffic on our earth or surface roads, during a rainy period. While a great many of our streets have become in bad shape from lack of maintenance and proper maintaining, they seem to suffer but little more than the streets that have been graded before the rain: this part remained in good condition during the rain, and was maintained the next day after the rain, and was in better condition than if no rain had fallen. It was this day before the rain, the road was cut up into ruts and pot-holes when it was almost impossible for motor traffic during this time, and could not be brought back into good shape with the ordinary road drag. The surfaced roads that were in good condition, such as Victoria Ave., which is partly gravelled and partly surfaced with concrete, which is cindered, and the Hospital Hill and road, could be and were dragged the next day after the rain, and were believed to be in good condition, and no damage from the storm. And now again this month, during the recent snow, the roads are in a deplorable condition. The City Engineer, Mr. Adams, of the City Office, and with the Public Utilities Commissioners for a procedure that will permit of the completion of the cancellation of part of South Mount Royal.

In view of the above facts, I believe it to be absolutely necessary to surface our roads and streets, and that a road policy should be adopted for carrying on this work as speedily as possible. And that a suitable road grader and surficial be purchased for putting the roads in condition for surfacing and for maintaining the same after surfacing has been done.

The travelling of First St. South is nearly completed. A barricade was built at the north end of Addison Ave. to protect the public.

The cement gutters and drains have been cleaned. All plans sidewalk have been cleaned and repaired. An ice-drift has been placed in the river at the mouth of the intake to prevent wash loss from cutting the river. Quarterly reading of the water meter was taken. All lawn services turned off for winter. One sewer service was repaired.

There were eight burials at the cemetery during the month.

J. R. JONES, Foreman

The Foreman's report was much appreciated, and it was decided to bring it up when estimates are under consideration. The Commissioner's report was adopted.

The Municipal Convention

Commissioner Stephenson gave an interesting review of the convention of the Union of Alberta Municipalities at Edmonton last week, and of his visits to Government departments. Mr. L. W. Brockington, city solicitor, Calgary, whom Mr. Stephenson considered one of the best posted municipal men in Alberta, protested against the passage of a lot of "phony" resolutions, out of which they got nothing from the Government. It was better to concentrate, he claimed, on a few important resolutions. That was the general sentiment of the gathering and yet a whole series of resolutions came in, and the Resolution Committee knocked out a lot. There was the usual demand for the sharing by the Government of amusement, suits, police and other taxes with the municipalities, but the Premier and Mr. Baker informed them that, in the present financial responsibilities of the province, that could not be done. They then dealt mainly with what he might call corrective legislation, in efforts to maintain the present assessment and taxation basis, which had been seriously threatened by the judges in some cases. They asked that the present final district judge's decisions on assessment be subject to review by a committee of the Public Utilities Commission, and the Legislative committee, of which he was appointed a member, will en-

THE GERMAN ELECTIONS

Like the United States with its Presidential election, and Great Britain with its general one, Germany is next month to have an election. Not since the Kaiser was deposed and a republic established, has Germany had anything approaching to a strong government with a clear and definite policy. All the different governments which have come and gone have been feeble, unstable things, divided between fear of external and internal enemies, unable to deal firmly with either because of the other. As long as the reparations question was unsettled, as long as the French were in the Ruhr and the German financial and economic system was hopelessly unsettled, so long was it virtually impossible for any German government to frame anything like a permanent policy. Now, however, that the Dawes report has paved the way to the settlement made at the London conference, when the French are in process of evacuating the Ruhr, and the successful international loan to Germany has made possible the real stabilization of the financial position, there seems to be a chance for something more lasting in the way of a government and a policy.

The number of political parties in Germany is bewildering. There are at least half a dozen of them with extreme reactionary monarchial nationalists at one end of the scale and revolutionary communists at the other. There is little doubt that if the German people were absolutely and entirely free to choose their form of government without any consideration of foreign nations, there would be a very large vote, possibly even a majority in favour of the restoration of the monarchy, though it would certainly be a monarchy with powers severely limited as compared with pre-war days. That does not mean that such a restoration is likely to come about in the near future if at all. Those who know the history of modern France will remember that while the Empire was abolished and a Republic proclaimed in 1870, it was not till about 1879 that the Republic was definitely established on the constitution of the country. Until then the monarchy was regarded as the real permanent form of government, and the republic only a temporary phase. If it had not been for the hopeless political incapacity of the various royalist claimants, France would probably have had the monarchy restored. The deposed Kaiser and his family have not in the past given much evidence of tact and adaptiveness to changed conditions. It is quite possible that if the German republic can maintain itself in existence for the next few years and prove itself capable of giving really efficient government to the people, the monarchial feeling will gradually die out as it has done in France, and the republic become the permanent constitution of Germany.

It is difficult to anticipate the results of the coming election. In the last Reichstag or Parliament, no party had anything like a working majority, and the government was carried on only by a coalition of several parties. In the coming election it is thought that the extremists at either end are likely to lose ground. The Nationalists favour not only the restoration of the monarchy but also the reputation of the Dawes report and they oppose Germany's applying for membership of the League of Nations. The result of such a policy if carried out would probably mean war with France and the complete ruin of Germany. It is, therefore, unlikely to command any great amount of support from the people at the elections, and the same remark applies to the Communists and their wild programme. It seems most probable that the middle parties will obtain the greatest number of seats, and some new sort of moderate coalition come into existence, which will try at least to some extent to carry out Germany's agreements with the Allies, and re-establish the peace of Europe. For the sake of a weary world, it is to be hoped that this likelihood will be transformed into reality when the election actually takes place in December.

WHAT THE YOUNG PEOPLE READ

The very excellent little public library which we have in the city appears to be taken advantage of more by children than by the older citizens. At least there always seem to be many more children than grown-ups in the library during its open hours. It is rather interesting to see the type of books which meet with most favour amongst the young folks. Naturally, as one would expect, fiction is the most sought after, though we fancy that there is a greater interest taken in natural history, in beasts, birds and fishes, by the present generation of young people than by those of last generation. For this excellent fact the writers of animal books which embody much useful information in the form of stories, are to be thanked. Writers like Seton Thompson, Long and Roberts have introduced our young people to a class of literature which is entirely healthy as it is entertaining.

Sea stories are not in the first flight of popularity, which is not surprising in view of the number of children to whom the sea is an entirely unknown thing so far as actual experience is concerned. The bold, bad pirate of the "Treasure Island" type no longer holds first place in the imagination of our boys. His place seems to be occupied by the dashing cowboy hero in spite of the fact that most Western children must be comparatively familiar with cowboys and sufficiently aware that many of them are not particularly dashing nor enjoy any great opportunities of being heroic. However, there is a romantic halo from the past still lingering round these worthies, and the throb of the motor car seems unlikely ever to destroy or to rival the attraction which lies in the thunder of galloping hoofs as Deadwood Dick speeds away into the night to rescue Lovely Lou from Sinister Sam.

We doubt also if school stories have as much popularity as formerly. In the halcyon days of "The Boys' Own Paper" and "Chums," school stories, equipped with bullies, heroes of the football field, and unexplained scandals of the examination room, were highly popular, but they have rather fallen from grace. They were mostly written about boarding schools of the British type, which are unfamiliar and not attractive to the boys and girls of our co-educational day schools.

We hardly venture to suggest the type of story which appeals to the school girls of the present day. The rather sugary and tame girls' stories of the past were not in a high class of literature, but we fancy that in one line or another the young ladies still holds the field as against anything in the nature of improving or thrilling tales.

On the whole we believe that the taste of our young people for books is certainly no worse and is probably at least more intelligent than it used to be, and it is satisfactory that within our slender resources we can in the public library encourage them to read healthily and with enjoyment.

THE PEACE RIVER COUNTRY'S RAILWAY COMMUNICATIONS

The demand of the inhabitants of the Peace River country for improved railway communications, and in particular for a railway giving access to the Pacific, has for some time been insistent, and is now evidently being recognized by the Dominion Government and by all parties as one which must be given effect to. With the steadily increasing volume of immigration the need for new land for settlement is increasing also, and it has long since been recognized that the Peace River lands are of excellent quality for farming, provided that means are provided for getting the crops to the markets. If the only route available were to remain that via Edmonton to the Great Lakes, the development of the country would under a severe handicap, and would necessarily be slow. The route to the Pacific, on the other hand, when it is established, will provide a comparatively short railway haul to the sea, and will alter the position of the Peace River country from a seriously disadvantageous to a comparatively favourable one. The result will in all likelihood be an era of swift settlement and development. It may be expected to follow very much the same lines that the settlement of other districts of the West have gone on. As the country is brought under cultivation early frosts will tend to become rare. Mosquitoes will be less of a scourge. Roads will improve. The amenities of life will become easier to obtain. In due course and at the cost of much hard work and courageous effort in the face of difficulties another great area will be redeemed from the waste and turned into a fruitful and well settled area. The railway route to the Pacific is the key to this advance. If it is at all possible to finance it, the undertaking should go on. We in what will come to be regarded as Southern rather than Central Alberta, have every reason to hope for the addition of this great district to the really developed area of our province, and we hope sincerely that the railway will be completed with the least possible delay.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A local merchant informed us that on November 8th $1,300.00 was sent away from Red Deer to mail order houses. A great part of that was sent by people getting their wages from Red Deer business men. It is a pity that the money can be so easily sent away. The Governments, both Dominion and Provincial, favor the mail order house at the expense of the small country merchant. The Municipal Governments have no say in the matter. The mail order house demands cash in advance and does not allow inspection of the goods except under difficulty.

The U.F.A. Convention endorsed Alfred Speckman, M.P., and his stand in refusing to join the "singer" group. The U.F.A. convention in Battle River constituency endorsed their member, Mr. Spencer, because he did break away from the Progressives and join the said "singer" group. Those are tactics worthy of the grand old Liberal party in its prime.

There were six newspapers represented at the Board of Trade Luncheon Monday, four being the city papers and the other two the local press. We venture to say that there is not a town our size in the Dominion of Canada so well represented in the way of newspapers as ours, but we should worry. Let them all come, and the more the merrier.

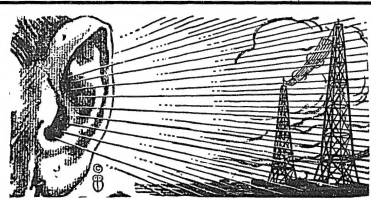

It was stated on the public platform at Condon Monday night that $20,000.00 had been added to the public debt of Alberta by the present Provincial Government during the past three years. If this is so, it does not look as though the Farmer Government is saving us very much money over previous governments.

WASHINGTON ON GAMBLING

This is a vice, said the famous George Washington, which is productive of every possible evil, equally injurious to the morals and health of its votaries. It is the child of avarice, the brother of iniquity, and the father of mischief. It has been the ruin of many worthy families, the loss of many a man's honor, and the cause of suicide. To all those who enter the lists, it is equally fatal. The successful gambler must push his good fortune, till it is overtaken by a reverse. The losing gambler, in hopes of retrieving past misfortunes, goes on from bad to worse, till, grown desperate, he pushes at everything and loses his all. In a word, few gain by this and thousands are injured.—George Washington.

VERY TIRESOME
Two weary-looking chaps met.
"Hello, Bill! What's the matter?" said one. "You look played out."
"Nothing new, Jack—nothing but work, work, work, work from morning till night."
"That so, Bill. How long have you had this job?"
"I start to-morrow," answered the weary one.

STALE NEWS
"Didn't your paper say I was a liar?"
"It did not."
"Didn't it say I was a scoundrel?"
"It didn't."
"I'm positive some paper said it."
"Perhaps it was our competitor in this town," hinted the editor. "Our paper doesn't print stale news."

TOMORROW'S
BUSINESS MAN

A Thought for Him to Think About By Edward W. Bok, from The Rotarian, "The Magazine of Service."

I asked Theodore Roosevelt once what one fundamental quality he believed was more largely lacking in the American character than any other, and which, of all other qualities, he would add, if he had the power to do so.

Without a moment's hesitation, he answered: "A greater efficiency born of thoroughness. We don't know what thoroughness is."
I felt this was the Dutch ancestry in him that spoke, and, as a Dutchman by birth, I naturally shared a keenly responsive chord with me.

Each of us has our own notion as to the greatest deficiency in our modern life, and I doubt if any two men would instinctively name the same lack which is upon us. But I am sure that deplorably vital in its absence in the American character.

But when you think it over calmly, did not Theodore Roosevelt put his finger on the one dominant and vital cause, because it is "that it is everywhere, in our American life when he said, "We don't know what thoroughness is?"

Now, the American's lack of thoroughness is not a deficiency in his want to be thorough, but because thoroughness is not taught him as a child.
On the contrary, the gospel of quantity and not quality is brought home to him the moment he reaches a point of understanding. He must learn so many words, he must do so many things, he must be able to read so many lines. It is always quantity—quantity from the start.

He learns these words and sums and lines as a parrot learns, so long as he sees them, and he is never taught to learn the largest number in the shortest given space of time is considered and told he is the bright boy.

The far more important fact of how well and thoroughly he has learned what he so easily recites is never brought into the question. As he progresses through boyhood, the same lack of thoroughness makes itself felt everywhere, and sinks deep into his consciousness. He sees his father at the simple task of reading his newspaper; as he sees his father read not the newspaper, but the headlines. The magazines, the boy finds, present everything in tabloid form, the most popular periodicals being those where the articles are shortest, and whose chief bid for public patronage is that they review, digest or epitomize the great happenings of the world. "We are very busy," he hears his father say, "we haven't time, you know, to read much. I like the writer who boils things down."

The boys sees his mother's housekeeping also boiled down to the most predigested cereals, canned goods, and prepared foods. "All you have to do is to add milk and serve," says the housekeeper. "Food is very easy to prepare, and there you are."
"Put our food on the stove, heat it for five minutes and your meal is ready." Whether the food is really good, she does not know. She has been taught to believe that the most of advertisements. But what appeals to her most is that it saves time; it is a road to simplified living.

No matter in what direction the boy looks, he sees a nation in a hurry, everybody rushing to do the thing in the best way that it can be done, but in the quickest way. All are seeking shortcuts to achievement.
He sees automobiles making speed; people crushing and pushing into subway and street cars; long journeys accomplished on flimsy, men speeding through the air and boasting of the minute and second they can cut from some previous record. So the boy naturally falls in with the rest.
He speeds through school, rushes to college, races through his four years, and approaches the business of life with every fibre in his being attuned to haste.

When he gets into business he finds the gospel of quantity and speed in the nth degree. Every step of manufacture is gauged by the amount of a day's work and how far he is below or above it is compared with the quantity produced on the same day last year. If the "room" has produced more, the executive is praised; if the output is less by comparison, it is either received with silence, or he is asked why the production is falling behind. Rarely is the question asked:
"Is the product better?" A man's efficiency is gauged and based on how much he can produce. Never mind if our cloths can bear no comparison to English cloths; our process produces so many yards to their lesser quality.
No matter if our automobiles cannot stand up on the road as long as those of foreign make; our boast is that we produce them to their own. Naturally, the boy imbibes the spirit that everywhere envelops him—unless he thinks it out, and few do. But where one does, invariably he rises above his fellows. Quality has always been "paid" in America wherever it has been tried. But it is not tried and maintained often enough. Quantity is an easier accomplishment, and so we go on madly producing quantity.

That is why in our education we are so deplorably lacking. The American wants to know, he wants to be intelligent, but he will not dig for it; he will not go to the source of information. "Why should I? I read this article which promises to be essential facts." But in the latter article it is not "all" there. He gets a smattering of the subject, with an equal amazing amount of misinformation. The fundamental ignorance of the average American is staggering, as it must of necessity be where there is no desire to be thorough in the information acquired. We are too keen to read a book we have heard about. We rush to get it; and then we hasten to read it and to get through with it, so that we can get on to the next. We are full of a desire to see a play that, others are talking about. We rush home, jump into our clothes, speed through our dinner, bolt the theatre, go restlessly out between the acts, look at our watches to see how late it is going to be, grab our hats, and we are out in the aisle before the curtain descends.
We rush some, jump into bed, impatient if we do not immediately go to sleep, and we have gone through the day.
Next day or next week we go through exactly the same scramble to see an other play or read another book—and always a new play or a new book to read. And this is our pace on the royal road to learning! What is the result of it all? We acquire a certain facility, but it is superficial. Our knowledge does not go deep; its roots are close to the surface. We leave ourselves no time to think. If I would sometimes as if thinking had gone out of fashion with conversation.

But the deer of things exclaims:
"Consider what we are, the greatest na-respect? Let him tell us. He recites would not contend, would you, that we should stop this progress? No, for the very simple reason that you are not not. But, I ask, do we honestly realize that all progress is really not progress, but a mere change of our mental poise, our serenity, and our contentment? We are breaking rapidly down every ideal of leisure. We regard leisure as something for the idle. We hall the man who rushes, and look askance at the man who believes in the truth of all these things, but that is not too fast. The pressure under which a people work gives color to its thought and action, and certainly psychology teaches us that we cannot have ripeness of thought and melo-diousness of decision at a hair-trigger pace.

Leisure is getting out of countenance in America, and in proportion as we permit this inclination tendency our national thought will show the results. We must have leisure and respond in order to grow wiser. It is the only soil out of which wisdom springs.

and very simple are in such a hurry as a nation, where are we going? We are certainly all dressed up, all tuned up to go somewhere. Where are we going? Where have we been? What young people the kernel of thoroughness by the very simple method of teaching them the advantages of abbreviations in their letters, compositions, or anything written by them. I have urged that each letter should be complete in and of itself, and that it should give out to the recipient the feeling that it had received of careful thought and not, as many a letter now indicates, that it was "dashed off." For this reason, I have insisted upon them that there are no such states as "N. Y.," "Penna.," "Mass.," "Md.," "Ill.," etc.; no such cities as "N. Y. City," "Phila.," etc.; that they do not live on a "St." or "Ave.," that they do not live in the year "1924," that there are no such months as "Jan.," "Feb.," or "Dec.," that there is no such thing as a "prof.," a "president" or "Front," and that they are not "Yea" or "Nay." Invariably wherever I have gotten the lesson home, the young people, having had instilled into them the idea of thoroughness in the what we call little things, have practiced thoroughness in their larger affairs. But there is no use of preaching this doctrine of thoroughness in writing to a son or daughter if they know the abbreviations rampant on his father's business letters and practiced by him in his letters, or if the daughter sees her mother's letters riddled with similar abbreviations.

We must practice ourselves what we preach to our children. The feeling will arise, particularly with the man of affairs, that a business house has no time for these "frills," forgetting that carelessness in correspondence is never a good advertisement for any business house and that the use of strongest commendations for a commercial house in the physical appearance and care shown in its correspondence. The letter emanating from a business house can be its surest advertisement of care and accuracy; but it can also be its surest revelation of haste and condemnation. Because an idea is simple we sometimes dismiss it as inconsequential, and we get what it signifies, and how great it can be in its potentiality. We flick a snorflake from our coat and yet, mul-tplied, that little atom can render helpless the most powerful engine concocted by the mind of man. We see a bird and we think of it as but an atom in the sky, overlooking the fact that a bird, multiplied, constitutes the most important economic factor in our lives and that without the birds the people of the United States would, in a space of five to seven years, starve to death and be effaced from the earth. So the seemingly small lesson of an avoidance of abbreviation may well be the harbinger of a system of thoroughness which would alter the entire fabric of American life and make of the United States within a generation a nation known for that quality of thoroughness which today it so sadly lacks.

XI.
The time for a greater national reform for thoroughness is here.
For it could so easily be, particularly in these days when all eyes are on us, that America's best could be the world's best!

THE PART THAT DIFFICULTIES PLAY IN A LIFE

What part do they play in life?

My thoughts are about the difficulties that face us in life.

A little sleepy town down in the Department of One, the town of Alton, with its population of 12,000, is the twelfth century with a portico reaching out over the street.

Across from the street, a little square and in a ditch there is an old Holbe woman who had a little stand.

With Mr. G. H. Biggs, Elmore, as her assistant, and Mr. H. Wallace as chosen secretary.

Mr. Alfred Speckman, M.P., occupied a seat on the platform, and provincial riding members in the district were present.

The following committees were appointed:

Pool Rates Committee—Messrs. McConnell, Neils, McGinnis, Gadeby, Mrs. Donnelly, Penhold.

Order of Business—Mr. Thompson, Delburne, Mr. Brown, Cator, Lundberg, Eklund.

Resolutions—Mr. Taylor, Big Valley; Mr. R. P. Penhold; Mrs. Woods, Crossroads.

Election of Officers

The following officers were elected

President—Mrs. Barritt.

First Vice-President—H. Wallace.

Second Vice-President—J. E. Brown.

Directors—Sedgewick—J. Schofield, Directors—Coronation—H. Wilson, Federal—Sedgewick—J. D. Taylor, Big Valley; Lacombe—M. G. Roper, Mirror; Red Deer—H. Patterson; Innishall—H. Biggs, Elmore; Olds—J. Lamarch, Olds.

To attend National Platform conference—J. D. Taylor, Big Valley.

The Board of Trustees U.F.A. Political Association—R. A. Van Slyke.

Mr. N. S. Smith, M.P.P., Olds, gave a review of the progress so far made.

The organization of a provincial dairy pool along the lines of the wheat pool, and incidentally of a provincial stock pool. The U.F.A. has valuable basis of the organization was to improve their economic condition; they had too long left that to the other.

Mr. Smith considered the territory covered by the Red Deer federal constituency the largest dairy producing district in Alberta, and consequently the U.F.A. committee came to the conclusion that first of all they must sketch the work of the committee towards this plan of co-operative dairy production.

The organization of an efficient business body and soundly managed staff, they could make a saving of 5 per cent, possibly 10 per cent, to the producer.

In 1922 the cream of the butter had been eliminated and ultimately this plan had brought dollars and cents to the producer.

The grading of the butter had given Alberta butter the highest quality in Canada; these two points were the first in the mind of the producer.

The pool, dairy and live stock, cream, the memos of association, explanatory letters and the program of the pool, would be published in the next ten days, and would be published in a special issue of the U.F.A. on December 1st.

He urged that this issue be discussed at U.F.A. December meetings, and that their delegates to the Provincial U.F.A. convention in January might be prepared for action. Then a pool would be put up to the market when the permanent pool committee appointed at the provincial convention would meet for further organization.

They were taking care of local pools already organized on a contract basis.

This temporary committee did not propose to recommend that the pool be put up to the market.

One plan was to buy out the creameries. In that case they would have to pay the carrying charges of investment, depreciation, and maintenance; they could not escape those.

The second plan was to lease these plants. In a third plan was to hire an arm of the butter manufacturer on a cost plus basis.

He presented a pledged business of 13 1/2 per cent of the total 1923 production of butter in this province—12,500,000 pounds.

With that, and with good organization, the committee believed a gain of 10 per cent in return for the figure.

Mr. Smith concluded with an earnest appeal for unity and co-operation in order to make these pools a reality before next spring.

Mr. Smith was warmly applauded on taking his seat.

Some of the Resolutions proposed by the following resolutions are among the most important passed:

Resolved, that this convention is strongly opposed to the recent action of the railway commission in overruling an act of parliament in the rate agreement, and that we demand immediate action from the Dominion government to bring their action into force.

Resolved, in view of the fact that legislation may be introduced at the coming session whereby in case of war and conscription of men, that the U.F.A. should also take that the convention request Mr. Speakman to support strongly such legislation.

Resolved, that after the formation of the plan for co-operative marketing of dairy products, thoroughly discussed, that the U.F.A. should also take that the provincial board, who are in charge of the work, to bring this marketing into existence as soon as possible.

Resolved, that this convention go on record as being in favor of the governments, provincial and federal, spending money in bringing new immigrants to Alberta, and that the average farmer at present in
